Abstract	BACKGROUND: Anemia in heart failure is both common and associated with worse symptoms and increased mortality. Several small randomized controlled trials (RCTs) have assessed erythropoiesis- stimulating agents (ESAs), but definitive evaluation and clinical guidance are required. We sought to systematically review the effects of ESAs in chronic heart failure.
	METHODS: An extensive search strategy identified 11 RCTs with 794 participants comparing any ESA with control over 2 to 12 months of follow-up. Published and additionally requested data were incorporated into a Cochrane systematic review (CD007613).
	RESULTS: Nine studies were placebo controlled, and 5, double blinded. Erythropoiesis-stimulating agent treatment significantly improved exercise duration by 96.8 seconds (95% CI 5.2-188.4, P = .04) and 6-minute walk distance by 69.3 m (95% CI 17.0-121.7, P = .009) compared with control. Benefit was also noted for peak owners consumption (+2.29 mL (kg per minute R = .007). New York React Association

View Abstract AB This study was conducted to investigate the effectiveness of dose-saving protocols in dual-source computed tomography (CT) coronary angiography compared with invasive coronary angiography (ICA). On 50 patients who underwent coronary CT angiography was performed dual-source CT (DSCT) and compared with ICA procedures. Entrance skin dose (ESD), which was measured at the thyroid gland, and effective dose (E) were assessed for both imaging
